

Highlights

- Activated sludge surrogates produced outputs that violated physical constraints.
- Thirteen surrogates were evaluated under data scarcity and extrapolation.
- All raw surrogate sets violated mass conservation; several predicted negatives.
- Projection enforced both constraints in all 766,350 predictions.
- Projection effects on prediction error remained surrogate-dependent.